PREFACE

THE two groups of fragments appearing herewith under the title of DOCUMENTS OF JEWISH SECTARIES, were all discovered in the Cairo Genizah, the greatest part of which is now in the possession of the Cambridge University Library, England, and marked as the Taylor-Schechter Collection. They are published here for the first time, each group in a separate volume. The first volume contains the group bearing the title Fragments OF A ZADOKITE WORK, which title was supplied by me on a hypothesis. The second volume reproduces Fragments of the Book of the COMMANDMENTS BY ANAN, which title was also supplied by me, but which may be accepted as a certainty. The importance of the first volume, which I have little doubt will prove a valuable contribution to the history of early Jewish Sects, suggested to me the advisability of furnishing the student with an English translation accompanying the text. The risk of giving a translation of such a defective text as the Fragments of a Zadokite Work unfortunately represent, was great indeed, and I was fully aware of This risk I felt not less when writing the Introduction and the Notes to the text, but I preferred to be blamed for my mistakes and be corrected, than be praised for my prudence of non-committal, which policy I do not always think worthy of a student. All I could do was both in the Introduction and in the Notes to call the attention of the reader to the unfortunate condition of our text. In the Notes in particular, I have especially marked many passages as obscure, the meaning of which was unclear to me. The literalness of the translation, to which I kept throughout, will, I believe, make the inherent shortcomings of the original fairly transparent. Words or phrases based on an emendation of the original which was evident to me are marked by asterisks. No student who has had experience in editing texts can fail to see at once that very little can be taken for certain, and the largest part of the commentary and the conclusions based on it in the Introduction can only be regarded as tentative.

The divisions into paragraphs were supplied by me, so as to enable the student to form some notion of the variety of matter touched upon in our fragments. I must further point out that by some oversight, which is excusable enough in view of the distance of my residence from the vi PREFACE place of publication, I had no opportunity to read the last proof of Text A of the first volume. I therefore collated this text again with the manuscript, and this collation resulted in a few new readings, which are incorporated in the Corrections and Additions at the end of the volume, to which especial attention is called. I have added also a facsimile of a page of text A and text B, thus offering an opportunity to scholars to make a fresh search in Genizah material. Nobody will rejoice more than I, if this should lead to the discoveries, though they be made "almost simultaneously," of fresh fragments, which will further elucidate the history of the sect, even should they prove to upset my theories.

Much less was the labour spent upon the second volume, קונטרסים Fragments of the Book of the Commandments by Anan. My contribution to its elucidation consists only in giving at the end of the text the necessary references to the Bible. Occasionally references will also be found to Dr A. Harkavy's Studien und Mittheilungen, part 8 (לקוטי קדמוניות, 2nd part, St Petersburg, 1903). I have no further comment to make on it, as the subject does not fall within the province of my studies, except that I hope it will prove a valuable contribution to the early Karaitic literature, and form a subject of discussion by specialists.

In conclusion, it gives me much pleasure to record here my thanks to Professor Israel Friedlaender, of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, in New York, and Professor Henry Malter, of the Dropsie College, in Philadelphia, who were helpful in furnishing me with translations from Kirkisani and other Arabic texts, quoted in my first volume. I have further to record here my thanks to Professor Alexander Marx, of the Seminary, who enriched this volume with many a suggestion. His experience in the reading of manuscripts proved also many a time of great aid to me. To my friend Norman Bentwich of London I am also under obligations for aid given to me in various directions. The Index was prepared by Mr Joseph B. Abrahams, Secretary of the Seminary, who was always at my call during the correction of the proofs, and to whom I express here my best thanks.

S. SCHECHTER.

INTRODUCTION

The two texts included in this volume reproduce the contents of two fragments in MS. coming originally from the Cairo Genizah and now in the possession of the University Library of Cambridge, England. They form a part of the Taylor-Schechter Collection, and bear the class-marks: T.-S. 10 K 6 and T.-S. 16 311. They will be designated here as Text A and Text B.

Text A extending from page 1 to 16 (inclusive) consists of eight leaves, or sixteen pages, measuring $8\frac{1}{2} \times 7\frac{1}{8}$ in. The first four leaves, or eight pages, count 21 lines on each page, whilst the last four leaves (or eight pages) differ in the number of lines, pp. 9-12 having 23 lines. Pages 13-16 are mutilated at the bottom of each page, so that it is impossible to determine with any accuracy how many lines they may have had, but it was assumed in the notes that they contained 23 lines as the preceding four pages. The writing is ancient Oriental, in square characters, but rather stiff, and there is very little consistency in such letters as ', ', the latter being occasionally so long as almost to be taken for a final i, whilst the ' is sometimes so large as to be confused with a '. The also greatly resembles the II, the left stroke reaching the roof of the letter, but this is a feature common to all ancient Oriental MSS. The MS. probably dates from the 10th century. Here and there we have letters provided with Babylonian or Palestinian vowel-points (p. 1, ll. 9, 10, 11, 18, 20, 21; p. 2, ll. 11, 16, 19; p. 3, ll. 8, 9; p. 5, ll. 8, 12, 16, 21; p. 6, ll. 6, 13), but the latter seem to have been added by a hand of a more recent date. Some words are crossed through by the scribe (p. 11, ll. 13, 16; p. 12, l. 17), as indicated in the text. The MS. is possibly defective at the beginning and is certainly so at the end. Pages 13—16 are badly mutilated, both on the edges and at the bottom of the page. The MS. is also torn and obliterated in some other places, by which a few words or letters are affected1. Besides the missing pages at the end and at the beginning, there is a lacuna between p. 8 and p. 9, the MS. breaking up at the end of a line, and perhaps in the middle of a sentence. It is impossible to determine how many pages may be missing here. I have also indicated such a lacuna at the end of p. 12, but have subsequently come to the conclusion to consider it as continuous. As will be seen from the Notes, we have here to deal with a very careless scribe, who not only may have had a very poor copy before him, but also disfigured his text in several places by his inability to read his MS. correctly (p. 1, l. 12; p. 3, l. 7; p. 5, l. 15; p. 8, l. 3; p. 10, l. 21; p. 11, l. 9; p. 13, l. 6; p. 16, l. 2, text and notes).

Text B, covering pages 19 and 20, consists of one leaf, or two pages, measuring $13\frac{1}{2} \times 8$ in., written in square characters, but already with a tendency to cursive. Some words are also provided with Babylonian and Palestinian vowel-points (p. 19, ll. 2, 15, 34, 35; p. 20, ll. 2, 3, 7, 8, 11, 14, 16, 19, 20, 24, 33); other words, again, are cancelled by the scribe himself (p. 20, ll. 5--6). It is undoubtedly of a later date than Text A (perhaps the 11th or 12th century), but the scribe must have been more careful and also had a better copy before him. Perhaps it will be more correct to speak of it as another recension of the same Text, as the differences are of such a nature that they cannot always be accounted for by the mere carelessness of the scribe of Text A or by such mere variants inevitable in two MSS. of the same text. This will be best seen by a comparison of the two texts, which on pp. 7—8 overlap each other, and the English translation of which appears in parallel columns.

Apart from the defective state of the MS. owing to age, or the carelessness of the scribe, its whole contents, at least as they are represented by Text A, are in a very fragmentary state, leaving the impression that we are dealing with extracts from a larger work, put together, however, in a haphazard way, with little regard to completeness or order. This is particularly discernible in the legal part. Thus we have on p. 7, l. 8 (=p. 19, l. 5) a reference to the laws concerning vows, which is practically not taken up again till p. 16, 1. 5. Page 10, 1l. 4—10, again forming the beginning of what we may call the constitution of the Sect and its organization, is suddenly broken off by laws bearing upon Levitical purity, covering about four lines, from which the scribe abruptly passes to Sabbath laws, covering the last ten lines of p. 10, and the whole of p. 11. Then he gives us another law of Levitical purity, covering about a line and a half, but followed by laws bearing upon the Sabbath, upon the relation of the Sect to heathers, upon dietary laws, taking up the larger part of p. 12 (from line 2 to line 15), and concluding with two Levitical purity laws, condensed in two short paragraphs (p. 11, ll. 15—18). It is here where he returns again to the constitution of the Sect and its organization, extending to about the end of p. 14; whilst pp. 15 and 16 represent laws relating to oaths and vows (p. 11, ll. 1-4); laws bearing upon the treatment of penitents (p. 15, l. 5 to end); and again, laws relating to vows and free offerings to the altar. In other parts of the MS, we have the same feeling of abruptness and incompleteness; as for instance, on p. 3, ll. 12—16, where we may assume that the reference to the seasons and festivals was followed by a lengthy exposition of the calendar of the Sect. Possibly the scribe omitted it as being in his view a mere repetition of the Book of Jubilees. Page 4, l. 4, again, דוה פרוש etc., we could expect a list of the names of the leaders of the Sect, and their history; but of this no trace is left in our text.

The language of the MS. is for the most part pure Biblical Hebrew. The first three pages rise even to the dignity of Scriptural poetry, though a good deal of it is obscured by the unfortunate condition in which the text is at present. But there are in it terms and expressions which occur only in the Mishna or even only in the Rabbinic literature dating from the first centuries of the Middle Ages. Such are:

The term בית השתחות (p. 11, l. 22) for a place of worship, even suggests a much later influence. It is, however, not impossible that all such expressions pointing to a later date are mere substitutions by the later scribe for the original terms. The term 770 again (p. 7, 1. 6, etc.), occurring frequently in the sense of custom (=משפט or מנהג), is almost entirely unknown otherwise in the Hebrew literature. Strange also is the way in which citations from the Scriptures extending over the greatest part of the Bible are introduced without regard to strict consistency. The usual שנאמר is entirely absent and replaced by כאשר אמר (p. 4, l. 20; p. 7, ll. 8, 14, 16; p. 9, l. 2; p. 16, ll. 6, 15; p. 20, l. 16), followed occasionally by the name of the prophet, as אמר משה (p. 5, l. 8; p. 8, l. 14; p. 19, 1. 26) or אשר אמר ישעיה (p. 6, 1. 7) or אשר אמר ישעיה (p. 19, 1. 11). Sometimes, we have even אשר אמר אל or אמר אמר אמר (p. 6, 1, 13; p. 8, 1, 0; cf. p. 9, l. 7). The same expression is also used with reference to the Pseudepigrapha אישר אמר עליהם לוי בן יעקב. In other places we have the more familiar כתוב or כתוב ביד or כתוב ביד (p. 5, l. 1; p. 7, l. 19; p. 9, l. 5; p. 11, ll. 17, 20; p. 19, ll. 1, 7). Sometimes, however, we have embedded whole groups of verses from the Scriptures without any introductory formula whatever, which in some places at least may be due to a mere clerical error (p. 5, l. 13; p. 8, l. 2). Altogether, the quotations from the Scriptures are seldom correctly given, so that sometimes the source is hardly recognizable (p. 2, l. 11; p. 5, l. 14 seq.; p. 7, l. 11; p. 8, l. 3). As a rule these deviations from the Massoretic text are mere textual corruptions of a careless scribe and not to be explained by the variae lectiones suggested by any known version, or quotation by any ancient authority. A specially noteworthy feature to which attention should be drawn is the absence of the Tetragrammaton or any other Biblical appellation for God besides 38, which is consistently used in both texts.

The contents of the MS. are in their present state about equally divided between Hagada and Halacha. The first part (pp. 1—8), dealing largely with matter of an historical and doctrinal nature, and the second part being chiefly occupied with subjects of a rather legal character. The Hagada as well as the Halacha represent apparently the constitution and the teachings of a Sect long ago extinct, but in which we may perhaps easily detect the parent of later schisms with which history dealt more leniently.

The defective state of the MS. and the corrupt condition of the text in so many places make it impossible to draw a complete picture of the Sect. Yet what remains offers us a few distinct features and salient points enabling us to catch a few glimpses of the history of the Sect, its claims and its relation to the rest of the nation.

First, as to its history: After the completion of 390 years, forming the End of the Wrath (p. 1, 1, 5) or as it is termed in another place, "the end of the desolation of the land" (p. 5, l. 20), begun with the delivering of Israel into the hands of Nebuchadnezzar, the King of Babylon, God, we are told, made bud from Israel and Aaron a branch to inherit his land (p. 1, ll. 6, 7). This would bring us to within a generation of Simon the Just, who flourished about 290 B.C. For twenty years, however, closely following the End of the Wrath, Israel was blind, groping its way, because of the evil effects of the erroneous teachings (or waters of lies) of the Man of Scoffing, who led Israel astray. This brings us into the midst of the Hellenistic persecutions preceding the Maccabean revolt (about 176 B.C.). But at last, as it would seem, this scion from Aaron and Israel overcame all difficulties, and was recognized as the Teacher of Righteousness whose mission is to make Israel walk in the ways of God (p. 1, 1, 11, and also p. 6, l. 11; p. 20, l. 31), and to undo the evil wrought in a former generation (p. 1, l. 12 and notes).

This Teacher is also called the "Only Teacher," or the "Only One" (p. 20, ll. 1, 32), and is identical with "the Lawgiver who Interprets the Law" (p. 6, l. 7) referred to in connection with the princes and nobles "who went forth out of the land of Judah" (p. 6, ll. 5, 6, 8). The activity of these latter, though representing both Aaron and Israel (p. 6, ll. 2, 3), consisted only in continuing and carrying out the precepts (p. 6, l. 9 סרוקקות) of the Lawgiver, in which they were "to walk in them for all end of the wickedness" (p. 6, 1. 10, text and notes). This seems to be the period intervening between the first appearance of the Teacher of Righteousness (p. 1, l. 11) (the founder of the Sect) who was gathered in 4 (or died), and the second appearance of the Teacher of Righteousness who is to rise in "the end of the days" (p. 6, l. 11, text and notes). Moreover, the Only Teacher, or Teacher of Righteousness is identical with משיח or the Anointed One from Aaron and Israel, whose advent is expected by the Sect through whom He made them know His holy spirit (p. 2, l. 12), and in whose rise the Sect saw⁵ the fulfilment of the prophecy, "there shall come a star out of Jacob" (p. 7, l. 18; cf. note 18). Apparently this Anointed One was rejected by the great bulk of the nation who "spoke rebellion" against him (p. 5, l. 21; p. 6, l. 1). What must be especially noted is that the Messiah of the Sect is a priest, a descendant from Aaron and Israel⁶. Of a Messiah descending from Judah, there is no mention in our text7. Indeed, "after the completing of the end... one shall not join the house of Judah," whilst the princes of Judah, the removers of the bound, will be visited by the wrath of God (p. 4, l. 11; p. 8, 1. 3, text and notes). Among these princes, King David is also included, who is held in slight estimation by the Sect (see below, p. xvii). As a contrast to and substitute for David, and his dynasty, the Sect put up Zadok, and his descendants (the sons of Zadok).

These differences, in addition to those still to be discussed, led to a complete separation of the Sect from the bulk of the Jewish nation. We are further told that they left the land of Judah for the North, and settled in the city of Damascus (p. 6, l. 5; p. 7, l. 19; p. 8, l. 21; p. 19, l. 34; p. 20, l. 12). They emigrated there under the leadership of the Star (p. 7, ll. 18, 19), where they established a New Covenant⁸. Unfortunately, there is a lacuna in our text at the end of p. 8, where the story of the Sect in Damascus was probably continued, but we gather from another passage that the Only Teacher found his death in Damascus, but is expected to rise again (p. 19, l. 35; p. 20, l. 1; cf. also p. 6, l. 11). This disappearance, as it seems,

⁴ The death, or the gathering in of the Teacher is stated in p. 19, l. 35; p. 20, l. 1. See also p. 20, l. 14.

⁵ See p. 12, l. 23 (משוח–אהרו), p. 19, l. 10 (משיח), p. 20, l. 10 (משיח), which latter reading is supported by p. 1, l. 7. In p. 14, l. 19 the word or or or was probably torn off.

⁶ Rather obscure is the meaning of יישראל in all these places, unless it indicates that the mother of the Messiah will descend from a lay family. As it appears from p. 6, ll. 2, 3, the Sect insisted that the lay element should be represented in all important functions.

⁷ Cf. Test. Reuben 6 8, and Introduction of Dr Charles, p. xcvii.

⁸ See p. 6, l. 19 and references given there, and p. 8, l. 21.

led to backsliding and apostacy from the Sect, but the backsliders were expelled from the Congregation, and admonished to come back to the Station of men of perfect holiness (p. 20, ll. 3, 4 and 5). In case they persisted in their apostacy, they and their families had no longer a "share in the House of the Torah" (p. 20, ll. 10, 13). They are regarded as the men of scoffing (p. 20, ll. 10, 11), and are cursed by the saints of the Most High (p. 20, l. 8), and no one is to associate with them in wealth and in work (p. 20, l. 7).

Neither these apostacies, however, nor the death of the Only Teacher, affected the fortunes of the Sect to such a degree as to be followed by its immediate extinction. Apparently the Sect continued its existence for a considerable time after these events had taken place. The Sect was constituted of four estates: Priests, Levites, Israelites and Proselytes (p. 14, ll. 3, 6). Its government, however, was placed in the hands of the first three estates (p. 10, ll. 4, 5)9 consisting of a body of ten men selected of the Congregation, in which the tribe of Levi and Aaron were represented by four and the Israelites by six men (p. 10, ll. 5, 6). Only men between the age of twenty-five and sixty were eligible, who had to be learned in the Book of the Hagu and in the foundations of the Covenant (p. 10, 11.6-8). At the head of the governing body stood two men, the one a regular priest whilst the other bore the title of Censor (מבקר) an office otherwise unknown in Judaism (p. 13, 1l. 2, 5, 6; p. 14, ll. 6, 8). The priest, who had to be a man between thirty and sixty, was expected to be learned in the Book of the Hagu, in all the laws of the Torah (p. 13, l. 2; p. 14, ll. 8, 9), and a part of his office was to record in writing all the members of the settlement by their names in the following order: Priests, Levites, Israelites and Proselytes, as well as to give decisions in certain cases (p. 14, l. 6; see also p. 13, l. 5). More important were the functions of the Censor, who had to be a man between thirty and fifty, and who perhaps, as a rule, represented the lay element¹⁰, giving instruction "to the many" (p. 13, 1, 7) which he even imparts to the Priest (p. 13, ll. 5-6). He is to be first consulted in the case of admission of new members wishing to join the Sect, and to examine them, and to give them their place in it (p. 13, ll. 11-12). Offences committed by members of the Sect are reported to him, and penitents are apparently to apply to him for readmission (p. 9, l. 18 seq., and p. 15, l. 7 seq.). Every litigation and controversy is also brought before him (p. 13, ll. 14, 15)11, and together with the Judges, he administers the monthly offerings of the Congregation, out of which the needy and the aged are to be supported tendency of the Sect to have the lay element represented in all their important offices.

⁹ No representation from the proselytes is mentioned there.

¹⁰ This is the impression one receives from p. 13, ll. 5, 6, where the Censor is put in contradistinction to the Priest. See above, p. xiii, note 6, for the ¹¹ See p. 15, l. 13, where the text, however, is defective.

(p. 14, l. 13 seq.). We must assume that a governing body consisting of ten Judges was only required in the ease of larger settlements. Their jurisdiction was very extensive, they having the power to inflict capital punishment and banishment on the members of the Sect, besides determining the regular civil cases (p. 9, l. 10; p. 10, l. 1; p. 12, l. 4), but at least a Priest and a Censor were considered a necessity as soon as the population counted at least ten members. If the Priest is not "tried," a Levite takes his place (p. 13, l. 3).

In this manner the Sect organized itself in various cities (p. 12, l. 19) or camps (p. 7, l. 6; p. 14, l. 3), forming there congregations or assemblies (p. 11, l. 23; p. 12, l. 6; p. 13, l. 11; p. 14, l. 10). One city, however, seems to have been set apart as the City of the Sanctuary, the inhabitants of which were submitted to a rigorous observance of certain laws connected with Levitical purity (p. 12, ll. 1, 2). Perhaps it was in this Sanctuary that the altar was placed in which regular sacrifices were brought (p. 11, l. 17), whilst the other settlements were only provided with a house of worship, which also had to be avoided by the unclean (p. 11, l. 22).

Thus far, the history and the constitution of the Sect as suggested by our MS. We come now to its teachings. That the Sect accepted the Canon of the Old Testament needs no further proof. This is clear enough both from its tenets and practices, regulated after the injunctions of the Scriptures as understood by the Sect. In the Halacha as well as in the Hagada we have constant citations from and allusions to almost all the parts of the Scriptures. One of the most important tenets of the Sect bearing upon the Messianic belief is largely based on a passage from the Prophets (p. 3, l. 21), who are further eited in the polemics against its opponents (p. 4, l. 13 seq.; p. 5, l. 13; p. 7, l. 14, etc.). For the practice, of course, it is the Pentateuch which is eonsidered the main authority, cited under the term of Torah, חורת or חורת ספר התורה or ספר התורה (see, for instance, p. 5, l. 2; p. 7, l. 7; p. 15, l. 2; p. 16, l. 5; p. 20, l. 13), and forming the particular object of interpretation; though in eontradistinction to the Rabbinic usage, the Sect occasionally also derives norms for the practice from the prophetic writings (p. 9, 11, 9-10, text and notes).

But besides the collection of the Books forming the Canon of the Old Testament, the Sect seems also to have considered as sacred certain "external writings," forming a part of the Pseudepigrapha. This can be said with certainty of the Book of Jubilees, which is once quoted by its full name as the Book of the Divisions of the Seasons (p. 16, l. 3 מכל מהלקות העתים), but to which reference is more frequently made without giving the name (see Index sub Book of Jubilees). The same may also be maintained with fair certainty of the Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs, to a portion of which, the Testament of Levi (p. 4, l. 15), at least, we have a fairly distinct reference, whilst there are also other allusions to it (see Index). Besides these books still extant, though not exactly in the same shape as they have come down to us, the Sect must have also been in possession of some Pseudepigrapha now lost. This is evident from the reference to Yochaneh and his brother, who opposed Moses on the occasion of Israel's first redemption (p. 5, ll. 17—18, text and notes). In another place we have an allusion to "the Word which Jeremiah has spoken to Baruch, the son of Neriah, and Gehazi, the servant of Elisha" (p. 8, ll. 20, 21), which suggests the existence of Pseudepigraphic works ascribed to these Biblical personages and considered authoritative by the Sect. Perhaps some canonical importance was also given to the ספר ההגו (p. 10, 1.6, and p. 13, l. 2), the nature of which is not quite clear. It does not seem to be identical with the Pentateuch, as this latter is, as pointed out above, cited under the regular title of הורה (see above, p. xv). Together with the ספר ההגו are also mentioned the Foundations of the Covenant, בספר ההגו ויסודי הברית (p. 10, l. 6). This might suggest that the Sect was in possession of some sort of a manual containing the tenets of the Sect, and perhaps also a regular set of rules of discipline for the initiation of novices and penitents.

The loyalty to the Prophets on the one hand, and the recognition of the Book of Jubilees and other Pseudepigrapha as authoritative writings, mark the Sect with special features distinguishing it both from the majority of Jews (as represented by the Pharisees), and from the Samaritans, the most ancient Sect in Israel; the former being hostile to all the books not forming a part of our present Canon, and the latter rejecting even the authority of the Prophets.

Another point of supreme importance separating them both from Jew as well as Samaritan is the regulation of the calendar. The Sect looks upon itself as the remnant unto which God revealed "the hidden things in which all Israel erred: His Holy Sabbaths and His glorious festivals, the testimony of His righteousness and the ways of His truth and the desires of His will which a man shall do and live by them" (p. 3, ll. 13—16; cf. p. 6, ll. 18—19). It need hardly be pointed out that this passage is a mere paraphrase of the passage in the Book of Jubilees: "And all the children of Israel will forget, and will not find the path of the years, and will forget the new moons, and seasons, and Sabbaths, and they will go wrong as to all the order of the years¹²." The "hidden things" are, in the Book of Jubilees, disclosed to the Sect by a special revelation "a, but the calendar of this Pseudepigraphic work differs in the most important essentials both from that of the Pharisees and from that of the Samaritans (see below, p. xx).

It is, however, the Pharisees, in particular, against whom the polemics of the Sect are directed. They are, as it seems, dubbed as "the builder of the wall," or "fence," referring probably to their motto, "Make a fence to the Torah" (p. 4, l. 19; p. 8, l. 18, and p. 19, l. 31, text and notes). The accusations the Sect brings against their antagonists are both of a general and of a specific nature. They are denounced in our Text as transgressors of the Covenant, removing statutes and given to persecution of the righteous, and despising the upright whom they turn over to the sword, against whose soul they gather (p. 1, ll. 20, 21)¹⁴. They are the children of destruction, and, at least implicitly, they are accused of appropriating moneys belonging to the Sanctuary, robbing the poor, making the widows their prey, and murdering the orphans (p. 6, ll. 15, 16).

The adduced reproaches are of a general nature, forming in the main a mere paraphrase of certain Scriptural verses applied by the Sect without much discrimination to their opponents (notes to p. 1, l. 20; p. 6, l. 16, etc.). There is also to be taken into account that the parallel passages as offered in p. 8, ll. 5-9, suggest that these accusations can hardly be applied in their entirety to the Pharisees. For we have there also the complaint that their antagonist "cast off restraint with an high hand to walk in the ways of the wicked." But as is clear from the context these "wicked" can be none else but the Greeks¹⁵. The denunciation must accordingly refer to the Hellenistic Party, in part, at least, unless there are some words missing in our Text. But we have, as already indicated, accusations of a very specific nature, and these leave no doubt that the object of the Sect's general abuse was mainly the Pharisees. The first of these accusations is polygamy, the opponents of the Sect being ensnared by two (wives) described in our text as "fornication" (p. 4, ll. 20, 21). It is in this connection that David (who married eighteen wives) is ruled out of court as one ignorant of the contents of the Law, which was only discovered with the rise of Zadok (p. 5, 1l. 2, 3, 5).

This prohibition, as it must be specially pointed out, extends also to divorce, or rather to marrying a second wife, as long as the first wife is alive though she had been divorced ¹⁶. This is followed by another accusation that 14 The "man of scoffing who dropped to Israel waters of deceitfulness" (or lies) (p. 1, ll. 14, 15; p. 4, l. 10, note 10 and p. 8, l. 14) and is the cause of all these evils, is perhaps identical with the Commanding One of p. 4, ll. 19, 20, of whom the same metaphor (מטיף) is used, and is, as apparent from the context, responsible not for new revelations but for false interpretation of the Law. Is he the head of the men of scoffing of p. 20, l. 11, who are the special opponents of the New Covenant?

15 See p. 8, ll. 9–11, איש מלכי יון, unless we should assume that in his preference for a Scriptural term the writer used the word pr for Rome (which latter does not occur in the Bible) without any regard to accuracy.

In See notes to p. 4, ll. 20, 21. Cf. also p. 7, l. 1; p. 8, ll. 6, 7. About the prohibition of polygamy among the Samaritans, see Kirchheim, p. 20. Cf. Montgomery, p. 43. According to the evidence of R. Eleazar b. Tobiah in his Lekach Tob to Deut. 21 5 (p. 35 b, ed. Wilna), the Karaites also forbade marriage with two women (cf. Poznanski, Revue, 45, p. 186). About the Zadokites, see below, p. xix.

their opponents "defile" the Sanctuary, inasmuch as they do not separate according to the Law, and neglect (according to the interpretation of the Sect) certain laws concerning 77, (p. 5, ll. 6, 7). Then a protest follows against the permission to marry one's niece, accompanied by an argument proving it to belong to the forbidden degrees (p. 5, ll. 7—11). But, both the case of אריות and not less this case of עריות belong to the group of laws forming the subject of the most heated controversies between the Samaritans and the Karaites on the one side, and the Pharisees (or Rabbinic Judaism) on the other¹⁷. The point at issue in the law of is not given by our author, but in that of עריות he agrees with the Samaritans and Karaites, and we may conclude that this is also the case with הזו. Likewise, the laws concerning the Sabbath, that play such an important part with the Sect, agree in the main with those given in the Book of Jubilees, to which also the Samaritan and the Karaitic codes offer some important parallels, but they differ in many respects from the Pharisaic practice 18. The few dietary laws, again, as well as laws relating to Levitical purity contained in this Text, show a strong divergence from the Pharisaic custom19; and the same may be remarked of the laws bearing upon the annulling of vows which the Sect seems to forbid altogether²⁰.

The annals of Jewish history contain no record of a Sect agreeing in all points with the one depicted in the preceding pages. But sufficient traces and traits seem to have been left of it in the accounts of the earlier sects to justify us in advancing an hypothesis towards its identity. I am thinking of the Sect of the Zadokites to which reference is to be found in the early Karaitic writings. Thus, we are told by Kirkisani in his Book of Lights and the High Beacons (written about 637), "Zadok was the first who exposed the Rabbanites and contradicted them publicly. He revealed a part of the truth and composed books in which he frequently denounced the Rabbanites and criticised them. But he adduced no proof for anything he said, merely saying it by way of statement, except in one thing, namely, in his prohibition against marrying the daughter of the brother, and the daughter of the sister. For he adduced as proof their being analogous to the paternal and maternal aunt²¹." Now, this description of the Zadok book well fits our Text which, in its Hagada, is largely polemical, whilst its Halacha affords little else than mere statements. A real argument and refutation of the opposite opinion we have only, as stated by Kirkisani, in the case of prohibiting the marriage with one's niece, which struck Kirkisani the more, as use is made there of the interpretary rule of Analogy or היקש with which the Karaites operate so much in their marriage laws²².

Of the laws peculiar to the Zadokites, only two are recorded by Kirkisani. The one is that they "absolutely forbade divorce, which the Scriptures permitted²³." In the chapter, again, treating of Jesus, and his followers, the Nazarenes, he remarks, "Jesus forbade divorce as the Zadokites forbade it²⁴." A similar remark he has about Obadiah of Ispahan (or Abu-Isa), who "forbade divorce as the Zadokites and the Nazarenes forbade it²⁵."

Hadasi's evidence is to the same effect, namely, that Obadiah of Ispahan (or Abu-Isa), like the Zadokites, forbade divorce in all cases; which, he declares, is not in agreement with the word of God. In a similar manner, he expresses himself in another place, where he censures the religion of the Zadokites for the same prohibition as being against the Scriptures²⁶. But as pointed out above, this is just the view of the Sect which regarded a second marriage during the lifetime of the first husband, even after divorce, as fornication. (See above, p. xvii.)

The second law which Kirkisani attributes to the Zadokites and to which he likewise objects is in connection with the calendar. "They (the Zadokites) also fixed all the months at thirty days each. It is possible that they relied in this on the story of Noah. Again, they excluded the day of the Sabbath from the sum of the days of the feast of Passover, so as to make them seven days besides the Sabbath. In the same way also with the feast of Tabernacles²⁷." Hadasi practically repeats the same fact without adding anything fresh to it²⁸.

What is meant by the story of Noah, we learn from another place in Kirkisani, and from Japheth's Commentary to Gen. 1 14, and Lev. 25 5. According to this testimony the Zadokites or Zadok made reference to the account of the deluge which lasted 150 days (Gen. 8 3), beginning with the 17th of the second month (Gen. 7 11) and ending on the 17th of the seventh month (Gen. 8 4), thus covering five months. This proves that each month counted thirty days²⁹. The same argument is indicated in the paraphrase which the Book of Jubilees gives of Gen. 8 3, "And the water prevailed on the face of the earth five months—one hundred and fifty days30." Now, the fixing of the calendar is just one of the most important points in which this schism showed itself. The Sect (as we have seen, p. xv) accepted the calendar given by the Book of Jubilees, which at once separated them both from Jew and Samaritan. But as we learn from these documents, the difference consisted chiefly in the fact that the Book of Jubilees accepted the solar year of twelve months, of thirty days each, and four intercalary days³¹. It is true that our Fragment contains no distinct reference either to the thirty days or to the argument from the story of Noah. But we must never forget that our Text consists, as explained above, only of extracts from a larger work (see above, p. x), and it is easily possible that Kirkisani was in possession of this larger work, whilst the scribe of our text, in his careless manner, thought it sufficient to indicate, in a general way, the existence of serious differences in the calendar between the Sect and its opponents, but omitted the details as known from the Book of Jubilees. It is also possible that our copyist relegated these details to the Halachic part, represented in our MS. only by a fragment, just as he did with the laws relating to the Sabbath, or to the annulling of yows³², whilst Kirkisani was in the possession of a complete copy. On the other hand, when a certain Karaite, Hasan ben Mashiach, in his controversy against R. Saadya (with regard to the calendar) attested that "the writings of the Zadokites are known among people, but they contain nothing of what that man (Saadya) mentioned; that there are in the writings of the Zadokites (various) things in which they differed from the Rabbanites in the Second Temple, with regard to sacrifices, etc., but there is not even a single letter like that which the Fayyoumite reported³³," we may assume that 30 See Jub. 5 27.

31 See above, p. xvi. This would agree with Beer's interpretation of the calendar of the Jubilees, in his Das Buch der Jubiläen (Leipzig, 1856). See Jub., the whole of ch. 6 text and notes, and references given there to the various explanations of the calendar of the author of the Book of Jubilees; to which is only to be added Epstein's discussion of this subject in his Eldad ha-Dani, pp. 155-161, but which is practically only a résumé of his article in the Revue referred to by Dr Charles. Epstein's suggestion that the Book of Jubilees has two kinds of years, an ecclesiastical year and a civil year, settles, it is true, many a difficulty in the text of the Book as it has come down to us. But it is not impossible that the original reading which was in possession of the Sect differed greatly from the present text. We have only to assume that in the case of Shabuoth, the Sect did not press the fifteenth of the month, taking it to mean the middle of the month or near it. Assuming the ממהרת השבת (Lev. 23 11—15, see Jub. 15 1, text and notes) to mean the whole feast of Passover, and ignoring the Sabbath of the Passover which the Zadokites, as we have seen, do not count, the sheaf-waving would take place on the 23rd, and the feast of Shabuoth would thus (allowing in accordance with Beer 30 days for both Nissan and Iyar) fall on the 12th of Sivan, which agrees with the Falashic tradition.

32 See, for instance, p. 6, l. 18, and cf. p. 10, l. 14 to end of p. 11. Cf. also p. 7, l. 7 and p. 16, l. 6 seq. 33 See Poznanski, Revue, vol. XLIV. pp. 176, 177. Cf. also his Karaite Literary Opponents of Saadaya Gaon, pp. 15, 16. See also Hilgenfeld, Ketzergeschichte, p. 160, note 271, and reference given there to Geiger. How confused and contradictory the notions about the Zadokite calendar were, is also clear from another passage of an earlier Karaite who thought that they began the month on the 15th after the New Moon, when the moon is in its full strength. See Poznanski, Revue, vol. XLIV. p. 172.

he had a copy something similar to ours in which the calendar differences were given only in a general way, while the Halachic part had more extracts relating to sacrifice than ours. The divergence between the testimony as to the nature of the Zadok books known to writers in the tenth century may thus be easily attributed to the difference in the texts used by the different scholars of that period. Our Text may thus, with good reason, be defined as containing extracts from a Zadok book, representing features contained in the copies of these authorities, but as it forms only extracts, these features are sometimes partly obscured; whilst other features may be entirely eliminated. But this does not in any way contend against the likelihood of their being of Zadokite origin.

This likelihood is raised, in a measure, to a degree of certainty when we consider the fact that it is the Zadokites from which the Sect derived its spiritual pedigree. It is to a Zadok to which the Sect ascribes the merit of having rediscovered the Law, in which act he is favourably contrasted with David, who was ignorant of it (p. 5, l. 5; cf. above, p. xiii). Who this Zadok was, of the many persons bearing this name in the Bible, it is impossible to say. At any rate, the impression is that he was a Biblical personage³⁴. But it is not only to the remote past to which the Sect appeals; the Zadokites or rather the Sons of Zadok, according to the Sect, form the "sure house of Israel," and are apparently connected with them who "held fast to the commandments of God," and who were in possession of the hidden things—of the calendar (p. 3, ll. 12 seq., 19 and 26). They are, indeed, those who remained loyal to the Sanctuary, the very chosen ones of Israel, called by name, that arose at the end of the days, and who apparently kept a Station מעמד, and were connected with the government of the Sect (p. 4, ll. 1-5; cf. also p. 2, l. 9, text and notes). A book emanating from such a sect might plausibly be regarded as the writings of the Zadokites, or as a Zadok book.

The term Zadokites naturally suggests the Sadducees; but the present state of knowledge of the latter's doctrines and practices does not offer enough points of resemblance to justify the identification of them with our Sect³⁵. At present it seems to me that the only ancient Sect which comes here into consideration is the Dosithean, for our Sect has left so many

36 It need hardly be pointed out that there are both in the Hagada and in the Halacha of our Sect features which strikingly recall the famous hypothesis of Geiger regarding the Sadducees and the Old Halacha. But this hypothesis is still so undeveloped in its details, that it seems better to leave the subject in abeyance. It is a further and larger question whether we have to deal with a sort of counter-tradition or with an interpretation claiming to go back to primitive Judaism.

marked traces on the accounts which have come down to us about the Dositheans that we may conclude that they were in some way an offshoot from the schism which is the subject of our inquiry. The accounts of the Dosithean sect are, as is well known, contradictory and confusing. They vary in date, in the characterization of the sect, and in the description of its origin. There is no need to reproduce them here, or to give the various attempts which have been made to explain them, or to reconcile their various contradictions. Yet almost all these accounts, contradictory as they may be in other respects, offer the one or the other traces of the characteristics of our Sect, which suggest, if not an identity with, at least the descent from our Sect, which should be noted here³⁶.

Thus, the testimony of several early accounts of the Dosithean sect connects in some way or another the Dosithean schism with that of the Sadducees, or puts it at least chronologically very close to the latter. This feature reminds us strongly of our Sect, which derived its spiritual pedigree, as we have seen, from the Zadokites. Some accounts go even to the length of making Zadok a disciple of Dositheus, which we may take as a mere overstatement of the high antiquity of the Sect³⁷. If Abul-Fath goes as far as to speak of a sect called Dustan, which arose in the time of Alexander the Great³⁸, it may mean that the Sect claimed to have its origin in a parent sect dating from the Greek period preceding the Maccabean reign. This would fairly correspond with the claims of our Sect, which places the first appearance of its founder 390 years after the desolation of the Land by Nebuchadnezzar, which would bring us, as I have pointed out, to within a generation of Simon the Just, who flourished about 290 B.C. Such a date could easily be brought, it may be remarked in passing, into connection with the Zadok of the "Aboth d'Rabbi Nathan" who, according to Jewish tradition, was the disciple of Antigonus of Soko, the disciple of Simon the Just, and the originator of the Sadducean heresy³⁹. I must, however, remark that I have my doubts about the integrity of the Text relating to this date. For our calculation would necessitate the assumption that the author of our Text knew more of the Persian chronology than either the great majority of the Jews or the Samaritans, which is not likely. As pointed out in the notes to our Text, it is probable that we have to read (p. 1, l. 6) ארבע instead of שלוש (490) corresponding with the seventy weeks of years of Dan. 9 2, 24. This cycle of years, however, as we know, is never exact, and may be adapted by any apocalyptic writer to any event in history which struck him as the great crisis in the history of the nation or even of his Sect. Such a crisis evidently took place when the Sect escaped to the North and sought refuge in Damascus (p. 4, l. 2, and p. 7, ll. 13, 14). But no such occurrence is recorded in Jewish history⁴⁰. We are practically left without any definite date. But at any rate, the claims of our Sect were for a very high antiquity, which further receives support from the reference in our Text, on p. 8, l. 11, to the head of the Kings of Javan, though our Text, in its present condition, shows Roman influences⁴¹. It is thus not to be wondered at if the Dositheans, as an offshoot of our Sect, made the same pretensions, and even exaggerated them.

Another point of contact between our Sect and the Dositheans is the calendar, both fixing thirty days for every month of the year⁴². The testimony of Abul-Fath is most emphatic on this point when he says, "They (the Dositheans) abolished the reckonings of their astronomical tables. All their months consist of exactly thirty days. They abolished the true festivals and removed the commandments of the fasts and the afflictions 43." When Abul-Fath proceeds to say that they count the fifty days from the morrow after the Passover, as the Jews do, the similarity with the Jews probably consisted in this, that they interpreted the ממחרת השבת (Lev. 23 11, 15) to mean the Feast (in contradistinction to the Sadducees who took that word to mean the Sabbath); but, on the other hand, they differed from the Jews in that they understood by it the last day of the Feast, or the seventh day of the Passover (see above, p. xx, note 31). Abul-Fath further bears evidence to the strictness of the Dositheans in their observance of the Sabbath, a fact which is also recorded with more or less variation by some Fathers of the Church. This is a feature which we observe also in our Sect, though the details given by Abul-Fath and the Fathers are not the same, and it may be that they have been misunderstood by the former⁴⁴. The statement of Epiphanius is more general, when he says, "In the

41 For instance, the office of the Censor, occurring frequently in our Text. (See p. 9, l. 18, and elsewhere.) Such an office, entirely unknown to Judaism, could have been only borrowed from the Romans. We must also remark that these denunciations of same way they observe Circumcision and the Sabbath," by which he probably means their rigour in observing it 45. When he further says, that "they have no intercourse with all people because they detest all mankind," we may readily recognize here the law of our Sect requiring the washing of the clothes when they were brought by a Gentile (because of contamination), and the prohibition of staying over the Sabbath in the vicinity of Gentiles 46. His statement that the Dositheans had their own forms of government is also borne out by any number of passages in our text in which the government of the Sect forms a special feature 47. His statement, again, that they abstain from eating living creatures may have some connection with the law in our Text on p. 12, 1. 11, which may perhaps be understood to imply that the Sect forbade honey, regarding it as אבר כון ההי (a limb cut off from a living animal), which would agree with the testimony of Abul-Fath that they forbade the eating of eggs, except those which were found in a slaughtered fowl 48. More difficult is it to know what Epiphanius exactly meant when he said that "some of them abstain from a second marriage, but others never marry." The text is not quite certain at this point. But may we not perceive in it, at least, an echo in some way of the law of the Sect prohibiting a second marriage as long as the first wife is still alive⁴⁹?

What is more remarkable is that even in the dogmatic teachings of the Dosithean Sect, to which most writers attribute a somewhat gnostic aspect, placing the Sect practically outside the confines of Judaism, traces may be found strongly reminiscent of our Sect. Epiphanius is probably right when, against almost all the others, he maintains that the Dositheans believed in resurrection of the Statement by most Fathers of the Church that the Dositheans denied the Prophets is probably only due to the confusion with the Samaritans. On the other hand, the assertion of Photius that Dositheus was particularly hostile to Judah, one of the twelve patriarchs, and that the Dositheans declared their founder to be the Messiah, is in harmony with the tendency of our Sect and the claims for their founder. Sharastani's account that they recognized in Dostan the Star, and declared him as the Only One (which is the Messiah), recalls also the claims of our Sect who speak of their founder as the Star, and apply to him the name of the Only Teacher of the Dostan the Star, and apply to him the name of the Only Teacher. It may confused it with another Sect. But see also Abul-Fath, 151 (Montgomery, 257), where we have some similar statement regarding the adherents of Dusis, that if they travelled at all on the Sabbath, they did not take their hands out of their garments. See Wreschner, p. 15.

further be suggested that it is not impossible that the term the "Standing One" ($\delta\sigma\tau\omega$ s, or stans) to be met in patristic literature in the accounts of Dositheus or Simon Magus, has its origin in the Men of the Station with whom we meet in our Text, and who were apparently looked upon as the leaders of the Sect⁵³.

We may further remark here that the Falashas, whose connection with the Dositheans had already been suggested by Beer, show also certain features strongly reminiscent of our Sect⁵⁴. To the feature of the calendar, reference has already been made above 55. To this may be added the fact which we learn now from the Te-Ezaza Sanbat of the strong similarity of the Sabbath laws with those given in the Book of Jubilees, and hence also with those expounded in our Text⁵⁶. The law, again, occurring in our Text, of submitting cloths brought by a Gentile to a special purification has a parallel in the testimony of several travellers, according to which the Falashas change their dress and take a bath after having come into contact with a Christian or a Mohammedan⁵⁷. We know also that the Falasha law prohibited the marriage of a niece, threatening all the terrors of Hell for its transgression, which affords another point of similarity with the laws of our Sect 58. Another point of agreement worth mentioning here is the tradition regarding Zadok's rediscovery of the Law, which may, as suggested above, be responsible for the claim of the Falashas that it was Azariah, the son of Zadok, who brought with him the scroll of the Law to Abyssinia⁵⁹. The term, again, is strongly reminiscent of the Falashas' Mesgeed, and may perhaps be ascribed to the influence of some Falasha scribe. But on the other hand, it should not be forgotten that the Falashas hope for the restoration of Zion and Jerusalem, and their veneration for the House of David is strongly in contrast with the tendency of our Sect.

We may, then, formulate our hypothesis that our text is constituted of fragments forming extracts from a Zadok book, known to us chiefly from the writings of Kirkisani. The Sect which it represented, did not however pass for any length of time under the name of Zadokites, but was soon in some way amalgamated with and perhaps also absorbed by the Dosithean Sect, and made more proselytes among the Samaritans than among the Jews, with which former sect it had many points of similarity. In the course of time, however, the Dosithean Sect also disappeared, and we have only some traces left of them in the lingering sect of the Falashas, with whom they probably came into close contact at an early period of their (the Falashas') existence, and to whom they handed down a good many of their practices. The only real difficulty in the way of this hypothesis is, that according to our Text the Sect had its original seat in Damascus, north of Palestine, and it is difficult to see how they reached the Dositheans, and subsequently the Falashas, who had their main seats in the south of Palestine, or Egypt. But this could be explained by assuming special missionary efforts on the part of the Zadokites by sending their emissaries to Egypt, a country which was especially favourable to such an enterprise because of the existence of the Onias Temple there 60. The severance of the Egyptian Jews from the Palestinian influence (though they did not entirely give up their loyalty to the Jerusalem Sanctuary), prepared the ground for the doctrines of such a Sect as the Zadokites in which all allegiance to Judah and Jerusalem was rejected, and in which the descendants of the House of Zadok (of whom indeed Onias himself was one) represented both the Priest and the Messiah.

This is the only workable hypothesis I am able to offer at present. But whatever its destiny—for the condition of our Text precludes certainty and invites difference of opinion—one result which I am about to state seems to me to be beyond any doubt. And this is that it is among the sects severed from the general body of Judaism in which we have to look for the origin of such Pseudepigraphic works as the Book of Jubilees, the Book of Enoch, the Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs, and similar productions,—and not in Pharisaic Judaism.

This fact was recognized more than half a century ago by Beer, who thus expressed himself with regard to the Book of Jubilees:—"Its whole type is a peculiar one, and is apparently based on a sectarian foundation." But this is also the characteristic which may be applied to the Book of Enoch and the Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs, which are so closely related to one another, all of which grew up on sectarian soil⁶¹. And surely this is the only possible view which could be formed of this class of writings by any scholar who has ever made a proper study of Rabbinic literature, such as the Mishna, the Talmud, and the "great Midrashim." Passing from these genuine Rabbinic works to the Pseudepigraphic class of literature, he feels transported to another world—from a world of interpretation and argument to a world of fiction. It is not any longer the living voice of the school to which he is listening, but the dead imaginings of some writer impersonating the heroes of remote antiquity. The Rabbinic literature indeed occasionally gives either in the way of overstatement or bona-fide as authority for a law or an ordinance or a moral precept the name of a patriarch or prophet. Such cases, however, are exceptional, and are rooted chiefly in tradition 62. On the other hand, with the writer of the Pseudepigrapha, the exception is the rule. He is a regular book maker, in which the masquerade feature is developed into a fine art, whilst, as a schismatic, he is not satisfied to form a link in the chain of tradition, but endeavours to appear himself as the source of tradition. His revelations are not in harmony with custom and usage, and must therefore be dated back to the Biblical or patriarchal times. This is a form of authorship absolutely unknown to "official Judaism" of the early centuries, if by "official Judaism" is understood Pharisaism which formed the large bulk of the nation, which identified itself with the Synagogue, which taught in the schools, and largely also controlled the service in the Temple. Parallel passages, it is true, to some of the contents of the Pseudepigrapha are to be found in Rabbinic literature. But these are chiefly offered by the Chapters of R. Eliezer and other works of a similar nature, all of them dating from a comparatively late period. Indeed, they are themselves a sort of Pseudepigrapha of unknown origin, only that their heroes are mostly Rabbinic heroes, such as R. Eliezer b. Hyrcanus, R. Akiba, R. Ishmael, etc., instead of Biblical heroes. They differ from the old productions, both in style and in tendency, and they are not above the suspicion of having already made use both of Christian and even of Mohammedan sources 63.

It was only of late years that different kinds of Pharisaism were discovered⁶⁴, each of them represented by the one or the other Pseudepigraphic works. We even went so far as to perceive in the Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs a Midrash, portions of which were read to the suspected woman under the sanction of the High Court of Justice⁶⁵. This hardly needs ⁰² See, for instance, Mishna, Eduvyoth, 8. 7, where R. Joshua says, "I received it from R. Jochanan b. Zakkai, who heard it from his master, and his master from his master, a law unto Moses from Mount Sinai," that Elijah's mission before the advent of the Messiah will only be in a certain given way.

מדר אליהו רבה, סדר אליהו רבה, attributed to the Prophet Elijah, does not eliminate the features of interpretation and tradition. In many portions, it is nothing else but a running commentary in the regular style of the Midrash to the texts from the Bible (cf. Friedmann's Introduction, p. 132); whilst the term הכמים is frequently turning up as authority for certain statements. Sometimes, even the names of the Rabbis are given (Friedmann, ibid., pp. 59, 60).

⁶⁵ See Dr K. Kohler, J. Q. R., v. p. 400 seq., and Dr Charles, Testaments, p. xvi. This is quite consistent with another theory of Dr Kohler that the "Mishnaic system is the code of life of a Chasidim refutation. As far, at least, as the Rabbinic literature is concerned, there is not the slightest indication justifying such a statement. The general impression we receive from the Rabbinic literature, which remains, after all, the only authoritative source for the teachings of the Pharisees, is that they had a deep aversion to all "external writings," though not all the Rabbis were equally severe in their judgment upon it as, for instance, was R. Akiba. Hence, it is not likely that they would have indulged in the production of a literature towards which they all maintained a more or less hostile attitude. And this impression is now confirmed by our Text. For whatever difficulties the present unsatisfactory state of our MS. may place in the way of the student, and whatever doubts may prevail as to the meaning of this or that passage, one thing is certain, that we have to deal here with a Sect decidedly hostile to the bulk of the Jews as represented by the Pharisees. It is a Sect equipped with additional sacred books of its own, a calendar of its own, and a set of laws of its own, bearing upon various commandments of the Scriptures. It is at variance with the nation at large in its interpretation of the past, abusing its heroes, as in the case of David (p. 5, 1l. 2-5), and the princes of Judah (p. 4, l. 11; p. 7, ll. 13, 14; p. 8, l. 3), nor does it share its hopes and aspirations for the future, the Messiah expected by the Sect being an offspring from Aaron. The Covenant of the Forefathers is an expression turning up again and again (p. 1, l. 4; p. 4, l. 9; p. 6, l. 2; p. 8, l. 18 = p. 19, ll. 30, 31 = 0.06, but it is the Sect apparently on whom both the duties and the privileges devolve at a later period. They who builded the Fence (thus trying to be saved by their own merits), failed to understand the significance of God's love of the Fathers, and the import of His oath to them⁶⁷, wherefore God hated them, whilst the Covenant of the Fathers belongs to the others (the members of the Sect). Indeed, these latter are the "sons" of the Book of Jubilees, who convict colony" (J. Q. R. v. p. 406, note 1), which need not be discussed here. With regard to the Testaments, however, I will only refer here to Bacher, Agada der Tannaiten, 2 ed., p. 457, where the real explanation of the בכתובים הראשונים is given. It is to be further remarked that Fer. Sotah, 16 d, omits these words. Personally, I have little doubt that בכתובים הראשונים is a corruption of לאכות הראשונים, this term being also applied to the heads of the tribes and other men of early times. (Cf. Mechilta 48a, and Aboth d' R. Nathan, 13 b.) Hence, his urging the מאכותם (Job 15 18). This view receives strong support from the version of the Midrash Haggadol ואומרים לפניה רברים שאינה כראי לשמען היא וכל משפחת בית אביה כגון מעשה ראובן בכלהה ומעשה יהודה בתמר ומעשה אמנון באחותו שנ' אשר חכמ' יגדו ולא כי"ח

פאב"ו מה שכר נטלו על כך להם לכרם ניתנה הארץ. See also Midrash Haggadol to Gen. p. 681. Cf. also Maimonides, Hilchoth Sotah, 3. 2. Perhaps I may remark here that Dr Charles' statement that even the Talmud (Kiddushin, 66 a) describes him (John Hyrcanus) as a second David (ibid., lii.), is incorrect. There is nothing of the kind there, the name David not occurring at all, and the impression is rather that the Pharisees did resent his wearing two crowns.

⁰⁶ It is noteworthy that reference to the ברית in one way or another occurs not less than 35 times in this short text.

⁶⁷ See p. 8, ll. 13, 14, 15, though the text is not quite correct in this place.

their fathers and their elders of forsaking the Covenant⁶⁸, or as those who "have forgotten commandment and covenant, and feasts, and months and Sabbaths and jubilees, and all judgments 69,"-that is, the men who differed in the interpretation of the meaning of the Covenant and the rules for the "feasts and months and Sabbaths and jubilees and all judgments" from the principles laid down in the additional sacred book, the Book of Jubilees. And it is among them, again, that those books arose which gave authority to the New Covenant. Having ruled out their fathers from the Covenant, they must date back their teachings to the forefathers and to the patriarchs and other Biblical personages. Certainly their Book of Jubilees, as well as their Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs, and their Book of Enoch, did not agree in all particulars with the texts which have come down to us. The Book of Jubilees, for instance, must have contained more Halacha than it contains at present. Nor can all these passages, either in the Book of Jubilees or in the Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs favourable to Judah have formed a part of the original works as known to the founders of the Sect. All such passages are probably a later addition by succeeding generations, who must have entirely recast the contents of the Testaments of the Twelve Patriarchs. But through whatever changes and interpolations this class of Pseudepigrapha may have passed—and certain of them may have been undertaken with the purpose of reconciling their teachings with those of the nation at large—their sectarian character always remained prominent. especially in their Halachic parts. Naturally all this class of Pseudepigrapha is of supreme importance for the history of Christianity, which undoubtedly was the consummation of all sectarian endeavour preceding it, and must have absorbed all the hostile elements arrayed against official Judaism; but for this very reason it cannot be considered as a factor in the development of Pharisaic Judaism. Altogether, I have the feeling that the "higher theology" is a little too hasty in its reconstruction of Pharisaic Judaism, relying too much on a few isolated Hagadic passages which in one way or another crept into Rabbinic literature, and entirely ignoring the Halacha. Lagarde somewhere makes the remark that the treatment of the Pentateuch must never be approached without a thorough knowledge of the Halacha, either in questions bearing upon higher criticism or in those touching upon textual criticism. How much more is this the case with Pharisaism. The only authoritative source for it is and will always remain the Talmud, and the "great Midrashim," in their Hagadic and not less in their Halachic parts.

FRAGMENTS OF A ZADOKITE WORK

TEXT A.

¶ I Now, therefore, hearken unto me, ye all who know righteousness1 and meditate ² upon the work of | God². For He has a controversy with all flesh³ and He will 3 execute judgment4 upon all who despise Him. | For because of their treason that 4 they forsook Him, He hid His face⁵ from Israel and from His sanctuary | and delivered them unto the sword6. Our Heb. l. 21 and p. 4, ll. 1, 2 text reproduced by the translation reads הבהנים והלוים ובני צדוק אשר שמרו את משמרת מקדשו בתעות בני ישראל מעליהם ינישו לי את משמרת מקדשו בתעות בני ישראל מעליהם ינישו לי these may be ascribed to the carelessness of the scribe, but it is not impossible that the differences in the first three words were made intentionally to indicate that his priests and Levites were not identical with the sons of Zadok. This is at least the impression one receives from the comment given in the lines that follow.

The text is evidently corrupt and before the שיחים some words are evidently missing. It is, however, possible, that we should emend הקור"ט שונים into הראישונים. Cf. below, II. 9, 10, though even with this emendation the sense is not quite clear. Another possibility is that the possible that the author was thinking of Ezek. 14 4, 5 ומבשול עונו ישים נגד פניו...למען הפש את בית נמבשול עונו ישים נגד פניו...למען הפש את בית. To place before man the "stumbling-blocks of his iniquities" is thus a means of leading him back to righteousness. אוא would thus refer to Levi and שמש אחשים would mean by which he (Levi) "took" Israel (in their hearts).

- 9 Heb. 1. 8 שלים corruption of מלים. cf. below, l. 10. 10 The meaning of these last two sentences is entirely obscure. All we can see is that he contrasts his congregation with its priests, its Levites and the sons of Zadok with the wicked men who followed the איש הלצון (Heb. p. 1, l. 14) who are further accused of having justified the wicked and condemned the rightcous (Heb. p. 1, l. 19). They are not entirely free from sin but they are redeemed by the fact that they follow the explanation of the Law as was understood by the forefathers (האשונים), that is Noah and the Patriarchs (in the Book of Jubilees). Hence they obtain pardon, as their forefathers did.

We have here as well as below, p. 8, l. 12, an attack on Pharisees whom he derides as fence or wall builders to protect the law whilst in truth they are the worst offenders. Possibly this denunciation is in some way connected with the accusation of Test. Levi, 14 4, "teaching commandments contrary to the will of God."

שות (?). The meaning of this law and the one that follows is not clear to me. It would seem as if in the case of death our Text insists upon three witnesses, whilst in other cases, punished only by the exclusion from the הוהם, two witnesses are sufficient; whilst the words, "and through one witness to exclude from the Purity," in 1. 23, perhaps refer back to the case of death, that the evidence even of one witness has the result of exclusion from the Purity.

Of course the correct translation is "beside the Sabbaths of the Lord." More probable it is that we have here a reference to Jub. 50 to, "and rest thereon from all labour.....save burning frankincense and bringing oblations and sacrificesfor Sabbaths," which the scribe in some way confused with the preceding law and wrote א "ע" א מועל מועל א מועל א מהם The מהם לאכל מהם מעגלי הדבורים. The is probably a mere clerical error, whilst the מעגלי הדבורים means as much as the Rabbinic כוורת דבורים, cf. Jastrow s. בוורת. I do not remember any sect that forbade honey, though there was the consideration that it comes from an unclean insect, cf. Bechoroth 7 b. Perhaps it refers to particles of the bees which are mixed up with the honey. Rabbinic Judaism had no scruples in this respect and allowed the honey as it came from the bee-hives (see Shulchan Aruch, Joreh Deah § 81), whilst the Karaites protested and insisted on a preparation of the honey (through filtering) so as to separate these particles. Cf. Salmon b. Jerucham's denunciation of this less stringent usage of the Rabbanites מובובים ועד יתושים ורכורים׳ התירו לבלע בחורים ואמרו לא זה משרצי אדמה בדבורים ושכחו השרץ השורץ ואחור . נסונים וסרים (MS). Cf. ²² Cf. Lev. 11 46.

Reading and supplying Heb. l. 14 בוכות הולשון. The אונישנון is almost certain though the בי is torn off whilst there are also definite traces of the בוכות. This agrees in part with the view of the older Karaites and Samaritans, who forbade the eating of fish that died in the water or were found dead on the shore. Cf. Wreschner, p. 51. The splitting of the fish had, according to this writer, to be done by one of the Sect, as the הבילא, according to some Samaritans and Karaites, had to be done by a Jew. Emphasis has also to be put on the בי אונישנון ווישנון. The law is directed against the Rabbinic opinion permitting the eating of the blood of fish. See Sifra 39 a and Kerithoth 20 b.

See Wreschner ibid. p. 52, about the mode of killing the locusts in water. As to meaning of the last words, "for this is the manner of their creation." See Chullin, 27b, where we have a homily to the effect that cattle have to be killed in a certain way because they were created out of the dry land (earth); fish, again, require no killing, being created out of the water; whilst birds, which were created out of alluvial mud (a combination of water and earth) occupy also, with regard to their ritual killing, a middle place between cattle and fish. The notion was thus that the mode of killing is in some way connected with the element out of which the animal in question was created. We may thus assume that in the composition of the locust, according to our author, the elements of water and fire are to be found, hence they shall be killed by water or by fire. According to the Rabbinic law, the locust requires no killing at all. See Maimonides, Mishneh Torah, Hilchoth Shechitah, ch. I. I, and Tur Joreh Deah, § 13.

 - ²⁰ Supplying Heb. l. 5 before יהיה the word אשר.
 - ²¹ See above, Heb. p. 9, l. 17 etc.
- ²² Reading Heb. 1. 6 משם instead of יחם. But it is also possible that 'קמי' (fool, ignorant) is correct. The meaning would be that even in the case when the priest is an ignorant man and has to be instructed by the Censor, the act of shutting up the leper had 10 be done by the priest. Cf. Sifra, 60 b, and Mishneh Negaim 111. 1, for a similar law.

- ¹ Reading Heb. 1. ו פלאי for פלאי.
- ² Heb. l. 8 נהיות עולם. Cf. Heb. above, p. 2, l. 10.
- ³ Reading Heb. ibid. התרת יה for בפרתיה. Perhaps this word is a corruption of "details." See Rab. Dict. s. ברט ה.
- ⁴ The MS. is torn and probably also corrupt in this place. The translation assumes the reading and emendation in Heb. 1. ס מרדובם (for נישא לכל מרדום).
 - ⁵ See Isa. 40 11.
- ⁶ See Isa. 58 7 which suggests the emendation of משנותיהם (wickedness) instead of השנותיה in Heb. I. 10.
- 7 The MS. is torn in this line (10) as indicated by the dots. The traces left suggest also some such words לעתי ז', or לעתי ז'.
- ⁸ Reading Heb. ibid. בערתי for בערתי. Cf. also Deut. 28 33.
- ⁹ Heb. ו. וו למעשיו supplying the y which is torn away.
 - ישכלו as much as ושוכלו. ושכלו.
- ¹¹ Heb. l. 12 יהותו which I took to be a corruption from אָיְצְאוֹ. See above, l. 4. It is also possible that the word is a corruption of יוֹחוֹנוֹ "genealogy," "pedigree." Cf. Rab. Dict. s. ביווים "gree." Cf. Rab. Dict. s. ביווים אונים וויים וויים
- 12 Supplying Heb. ibid. after the π the letters מחנה, or ייטרה "congregation."

¹⁴ See Heb. above, p. 2, l. 2. It is not unlikely that the א here is a mere dittography. Heb. 1. 14 באי ברית.

15 Heb. 1. ובאי ברית אל אל אל. I took the second אל to be a mere dittography. Cf. above, Heb. p. 2, 1. 2, and elsewhere. This is followed by אל ישאל, but the trace of the ישאל is very uncertain, and on closer examination I found it to be a 1, thus reading אל ישא ואל יתן meaning "to deal," "to have money transactions." Cf. Rab. Dict. s. שא.

אלא בני השחר או. 16 Heb. l. 14 בני השחר בני השחר אוה which I emended ב. Cf. above, Heb. p. 11, l. 2. Before the שבי some short word is torn off which may have been או סבר אור השחר הוא or שם. After השחר is also room for another short word, probably ב.

יד ליד 3. See Prov. 16 בף לכף לכף. 'Fr dip ''. See Prov. 16 היד ליד 3. See Prov. 16 היד ליד 3. Cf. also Epstein, pp. 68, 74, note 5. The היעת כף is one of the various ways of affirming a money transaction. Yet the meaning remains unclear to me.

18 Supplying Heb. ibid. after איש the word הבר of which traces are fairly visible.

ילמוקחו ולמומוכר Supplying the letters למוקחו ולמומוכר.

20 Supply Heb. ibid. the end of the line אמר of which some faint traces are visible.

²¹ Heb. l. 16 ועיטה, before which the letters still remain, which points to מחנה.

²² Heb. l. ילמְנְרֶיט . Perhaps it reads ממנים "open place." The two other words remaining in this line offer no clue.

²³ Heb. l. 18 ענוהו, the reading of which is very doubtful, most of this line being torn off, and what remains is very faded. After the word אונאהבת we have the letters מם.

²⁴ Heb. ibid. ממה, reading uncertain; and so is the following ... מה. which may perhaps also be taken as מהם or ב... יהם or בהם...

²⁵ Heb. l. 19 Da, but some faint traces of a possible to are visible before the Da.

²⁶ Only a few letters giving no words remain of 1. 22, whilst 1. 23 is entirely missing.

27 See Isa. 7 17. Cf. above, Heb. p. 7, l. 11.

28 Cf. Heb. above, p. 7, l. 5.

שי Heb. l. 2 להצילם instead of להנצילם.

30 At the end of the line we have the letters (שבי (which are certain), followed by traces of letters, the first of which may be a 2, but also perhaps D. Perhaps we have here some corrupt quotation from Mal. 3 ו בנה בי בחצים ב

- 5 Reading 1. 6 DN for UN.
- ⁶ See Lev. 47 3 and Num. 4 3, but our numbers correspond with neither of these precedents.
- ⁷ The MS. is here torn off. Perhaps we should supply as above, Heb. p. 10, l. 6.
- ⁸ Reading לרברם though only the roof of the ד remains now. Perhaps the meaning of this word is "to guide them." See Rab. Dict. s.v. רבר.

י Heb. l. דו Heb. l. וי

² Heb. l. 12 הרומתן הם . But the reading is very doubtful, and the faded letters look also like שני ימים 'two days.' It would then perhaps mean that the earnings of two days in every month should be set apart for certain communal purposes.

3 The MS. has here ב... מה as reproduced in the Heb. text, ibid. the middle letters being torn off. ממשכם ("the law," "rule") is the word which suggests itself.

⁵ Heb. ibid. יצום; but there are also traces of a ממני after the ז. I thus read וממני ימום:

- ⁵ Reading Heb. ibid. ביר for הם. Cf. Ezek. 16 49.
- ⁷ The MS. is mutilated here. I first read ינע, as reproduced in Heb. 1. 15, but on closer examination I find that it may be read "נוע" "who is wandering," that is, homeless.
 - 8 Reading and supplying Heb. 1. ולאשר ישָבָה.
- 9 Scarcely legible traces are left here of letters ז לה לה אין לה נואל which could be construed into אין לה נואל "who has no near kinsman." Cf. Ruth 3 9 and 12.

- Here perhaps some leaf or leaves are missing in the MS. The first word of this page (Heb. p. 15, l. 1) is faded and the last letter is discernible y which suggests איש "he shall take an oath."
- ² Heb. 1. ונם באלף ולמד ונם באלף ודלת 1. That is of ארים מחלה. Cf. Mishneh, Shebuoth iv. נז משביע אני עליכם... באלף דלי"ל. Cf. also T. B. Shebuoth 35a and Masecheth Soferin, ed. Joel Müller, pp. vii and 58.
- ³ Reading and supplying with fair certainty, Heb. ibid. ו"ל הבורים. The line probably finished with "or the curses," etc. Even in its present defective state what remains of the text allows us to assume that we have here a law that one shall take no oath either by the full name (the Tetragrammaton) or by any other name of God, such as Elohim or Adonai. The Samaritans, according to the well-known statement in Jer. Sanhedrin, 28b, were in the habit of taking the oath by the Tetragrammaton. Cf. Kirchheim, Karme Shomron, p. 26. Our Sect only allowed the oath by the covenant.
- 4 Does this mean to swear by the Law? Cf. Shebuoth 386 שבועה בספר הורה; but there it does not mean to swear by the Law but to keep the scroll.

- 6 After 'C "for" the MS. is hadly faded, but traces of letters ,—ה.. 'הוה מפ'...ה, but everything must be considered as very uncertain.
- ⁷ Heb. 1. 3 וחלל השם that is by his transgressing the oath he is profaning the Name. Cf. Lev. 19 12. At the end of the line probably the words יובא לפני are missing.
- 8 Probably some such word as in is to be supplied here. Cf. Lev. 17 rf. This law as given in the text seems to be a corrupt condensation of Lev. 5 4, 5 and 23.
- 9 Heb. 1. 5 אשל though very little trace remains of the א. Traces of letters indicated by the dots look somewhat like y. ביולדו
- ¹⁰ See Exod. 30 13. The meaning of the law seems to be that their children shall take an oath by the covenant when mustered in the congregation, that is at the age of thirty as above, Heb. p. 14, ll. 3 and 6.

¹⁵ Heb. ibid. יידיעהו.

¹⁶ The word following Heb. l. 11 indicated by dots read probably אייטר "who."

- יתפתה. Heb. ibid. יתפתה the reading of which however is very doubtful. The word looks somewhat like יחפור. The paper is torn in the middle of the word. Perhaps, it read יחפוש "the shall inquire into him," that is, into the novice or penitent.
- 18 Heb. l. $_{13}$ DN. The \daleth following it is very doubtful. The left traces look also somewhat like \cdots יי or D'.
 - 19 Heb. ibid. בריב. Cf. above, p. 14, l. 12.
- 20 Heb. l. 14 13. The word is preceded by the trace of a 7 and followed by traces of 11.
- ²¹ Heb. 1. 15 which I first took as אב. Then come some very faint traces of ער סיומו or מים מיומו or מים.
- ²² Heb. ibid. המתו which is however very doubtful.

 The left traces may also read הממקו or הממקו. All the remaining single letters are very doubtful.
- 23 Heb. l. 17 N2, which is however very doubtful, whilst it might also be the ending of any number of words like N2W, etc. The last six lines are entirely missing.
 - 24 Reading Heb. l. ו נפשך for כשובו.
 - 25 Heb. l. 2 מרוקרק. See Rab. Dict. s. פוד and פוד מחוקרק.

CORRECTIONS TO THE HEBREW TEXT

TEXT A.

Heb. p. 1, l. 2 ריב for דיב

- שארית for שאירית.
- Blank equal to the space of one word between ויורע and יוורע.
- בוק for חוק 20.
- p. 2, l. 3 ותושייה may also be read ותושייה.
 - 9 קציתם may also be read קציתם.
 - 15 may perhaps be read באשר.
 - 20 Supply after בשר the word אשר.
- p. 3, l. ו משפחה for משפחה, the ה, however, is doubtful.
 - 21 Omit interrogation mark after והלוים.
- p. 4, l. 17 Blank equal to the space of a short word after הונות.
 - 17 ההון for ההון, after which we have a blank equal to the space of a short word.
 - 21 מותם for הותם.
- p. 5, l. 3 twice, but the first is cancelled.
 - לאמר for לאמר.
 - זיקי for זיקות.
 - בעלילותם for בעלילותיהם.
- p. 6, l. ו מאחר for מאחר.
 - ויקח for ויקם.
 - ויגורו for ויגורו.
 - הרשוע may be also read הרשיע.
 - לחול for לחול.
- p. 7, l. 5 יכורו may be also read יכורו.
 - 8 היסורים may be also read היסורים.
 - 16 Supply blank equal to space of short word after הנפלת.
- p. 8, 1. 7 להון for להון.
 - וס Blank equal to space of one word after העמים.
 - 17 היעירו may be also read היעירו.
- p. 9, l. 2 אטר. It seems that the scribe wrote originally שייר but corrected it into אטר.
 - 3 רעהו for דעהו.
- S. (Frags. A & B)

CORRECTIONS TO THE HEBREW TEXT

- Heb. p. 9, l. 14 The blank is before הכל, and it is not impossible that this word was cancelled by the scribe and corrected by the following זכן.
 - בב for החוק.
 - בלו., for טלו., but there is no real certainty about it.
 - 23 יקום, but not certain. May perhaps also be read יקומי.
 - p. 10, l. 15 Before שישי we have the letters מי cancelled by the scribe.
 - ורק may also be read ורק.
 - מבצי may also be read הפצי.
 - p. 11, l. 2 , but the ' is hardly discernible now.
 - חפיל may also be read תפול.
 - 23 n... is very doubtful.
 - p. 12, l. 3 במשפט for במשפט.
 - p. 13, 1. 5 DEED for WEED.
 - וס דים, the letter דים very doubtful.
 - 14 ברית אל ישא ואל יתן for ברית אל אל ישא ואל יתן. The first is probably to be pointed אל.
 - At the end of this line are traces of something like a π and then of an \aleph and a \checkmark .
 - ענוהו very doubtful.
 - 18 bn. The b very doubtful.
 - יטה, may be read יטור. The j after the ט is certain.
 - 19 נקשר, the א very uncertain.
 - בי looks something like השפטים. The ש and the מ are fairly certain.
 - p. 14, l. 8 להברם, may also be read להברם.
 - ובה for ביד 14.
 - After אבורת, room for one word before אבורת, The last letter is still visible, representing a א something like a preceding it. There is also some sign which may be taken as a b. This would suggest the remainder or corruption of בפרך.
 - 19 Before אהרן we have the letter ה, undoubtedly the remainder of משוח.
 - p. 15, l. ו שבועה may also be read שבועת.
 - 2 Some traces of such letters as זָל, perhaps also בי, after מל, perhaps also מל, after מל
 - The אשר at end of line is followed by a אשר. Then there are at the end some signs which may perhaps be taken as אינו.

TEXT B.

- Heb. p. 19, l. 26 Between ערתן and אוא, blank of two words.
 - 35 ובכתבו, last letter of this word not quite certain.
 - p. 20, l. 1 At the beginning of the line there are signs of some letters now illegible, but, as it would seem, they were cancelled by the scribe.
 - 12 Before אמנה, sign of one or two letters cancelled by the scribe.
 - 20 After יעלה, sign of one or two letters cancelled.
 - 25 קרשו for :קרש followed by a blank of two words.
 - 33 אל חקי, doubtful.

ADDITIONS AND CORRECTIONS TO TRANSLATION AND NOTES

- P. 2, 1. 7 Heb. מקרם עולם. Cf. Ps. 74 2, and Prov. 8 22 מקרם ארץ.

Cf. also p. 7, ll. r, 2, and 3 where שבט seems בירוש, the Sect insisting that the particular laws mentioned there (p. 6, l. 18—p. 7, l. 3) should be observed according to their own שיר ס פירוש. This suggests the possibility of our having in p. 20, ll. 31 and 32 ... והתיסרו במשפטים would then mean "to be instructed." The מררש or בירוש is contained in the Book of Jubilees and similar Apocrypha which the Sect considered authoritative.
- p. 5, l. 19 (note 35). In connection with this subject, the following extracts from the Jerahmeel MS. in Oxford, kindly copied for me by the Rev. M. Segal, will not be uninteresting:

ועוד שני אגשים מכשפים היו בהם ושמותם יוחני וממרא וכשנכנסו בים וראו שהמים מסבבין אותם מה עשו הרבו (?) בכשפיהם ופרחו באויר עד לרקיע ואין לך ברייה בעולם ומכשפים יותר ממצרים שכן אמרו חכמים עשרה קבין מכשפות ירדו לעולם תשעה נמלה מצרים ואחת לכל העולם כולו. והללו יוחני וממרא היו שרי כשפים ומרוב כשפים שהן יודעים היו עולין עד לרקיע ולא היו יכולין מיכאל וגבריאל לעשות להם כלום מיד צעקו מיכא' וגבריא' להבה בתחנינים ואמרו לפניו רבונו של עולם רשעים הללו ששיעבדו בניך בשעבוד קשה עומדים כל כך לא היו חוששים אלא אף עליך הם עומרים ומניין שירד הקבה במצרים שנ' ארד עמך מצרימה אלא אם רצונך רבון העולמים עשה דין לבניך מיד אמ' הֹקֹבֹה למפטרון הורד אותם והפילם והזהר שלא יפלו אלא בים מיד הפילם מיטטרון בתָוך הים בעל כרחן באותה שעה פתחו ישר' ואמרו שירה וברוב גאונך תהרום קמיד"

- p. 11, l. 10 (note 28). Perhaps מחולל, is in contradistinction to מחולל, a term occurring sometimes in Karaitic literature. It would then mean even in a locality which has the advantage of being מושבת in which he may move all other things he must not move rock or earth.
- p. 12, l. 13 (note 4). Add—Meaning obscure. Perhaps we have in this law a protest against the Rabbinic interpretation of Lev. 11 36 according to which not only the fountain or pit remained clean but also the water therein. Cf. D.
